

November 6, 2013

“Economic Inequality: Causes and Consequences”

Charles Murray, American Enterprise Institute

Charles Murray is a political scientist, author, columnist, and pundit currently working as a fellow at the American Enterprise Institute. Murray earned his B.A. from Harvard University and his PhD from Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is best known for his controversial book The Bell Curve, co-authored with Richard Herrnstein in 1994. He first became well known for his Losing Ground: American Social Policy 1950–1980 (1984), which discussed the American welfare system. Murray has also written In Pursuit: Of Happiness and Good Government (1993), What It Means to be a Libertarian: A Personal Interpretation (1997), Human Accomplishment: The Pursuit of Excellence in the Arts and Sciences, 800 B.C. to 1950 (2003), and In Our Hands: A Plan to Replace the Welfare State (2006). He published Real Education: Four Simple Truths for Bringing America's Schools Back to Reality in 2008. Murray's articles have appeared in Commentary Magazine, The New Criterion, The Weekly Standard, The Washington Post, Wall Street Journal, and The New York Times.

Timothy Noah, MSNBC

Timothy Noah writes twice weekly for MSNBC's Web site, tv.msnbc.com, and twice monthly for Remapping Debate (remappingdebate.org). Noah earned his B.A. from Harvard University. Previously he was a senior editor at the New Republic, where he wrote the "TRB From Washington" column, and for a dozen years before that he was a senior writer at Slate, where he wrote the "Chatterbox" column, among other duties. Prior to that he was a Washington-based reporter for the Wall Street Journal, an assistant managing editor for U.S. News & World Report, a congressional correspondent for Newsweek, and an editor of the Washington Monthly (where he remains a contributing editor). Noah has written for a variety of other national publications, including The New York Times, The Washington Post, Harper's, and Fortune, and has contributed frequent broadcast commentaries to CBS Sunday Morning and NPR's Day To Day. In 2010, Noah was also a National Magazine Award finalist for his Slate coverage of Obamacare. Noah edited two anthologies of the writings of his late wife, Marjorie Williams: the New York Times best seller The Woman At The Washington Zoo (2005), which won the PEN/Martha Albrand Award, and Reputation (2008). He received the 2011 Hillman Prize for a 10-part Slate series on income inequality in the U.S. that he subsequently expanded into his 2012 book, The Great Divergence: America's Growing Inequality Crisis And What We Can Do About It.