Nanette S. Levinson is a Professor in the School of International Service, American University and one of two Directors of the Internet Governance Lab. She is a past Chair of: International Communication Section, International Studies Association; Information Technology and Politics Section, American Political Science Association; and the Global Internet Governance Academic Network (GIGANET). Currently she co-chairs a HICSS mini-track she founded on Digital and Social Media: Culture, Identity, and Inclusion.

Recipient of awards including those for distinguished scholarship, outstanding teaching, program development, multicultural affairs and honors programming, she has designed co-curricular collaborative learning opportunities as well as research-based training programs for the private and public sectors. In 2011, the Ashoka Foundation presented her with an "Award for Outstanding Contributions to Social Entrepreneurship Education" and included her peer-reviewed syllabus in its list of the top ten syllabi in the field.

Her research and teaching focus on internet and cyber governance, knowledge transfer, and innovation in a range of settings including the cross-national; international organizations and capacity-building; and social entrepreneurship. Recent books, both co-edited with Laura Denardis, Derrick Cogburn, and Francesca Musiani, are: The Turn To Infrastructure In Internet Governance, Palgrave Macmillan (2016) and Researching Internet Governance Methods, Frameworks, Futures, MIT Press (2020).

Additional recent publications include: "Idea Entrepreneurs: The United Nations Open-Ended Working Group & Cybersecurity". Telecommunications Policy 45, (6): July 2021 and "Crafting Science Diplomacy In Comparative Perspective: The Case of United States Internet Governance" in Internet Diplomacy: Shaping the Global Politics of Cyberspace, ed. by M. Marzouki and A. Calderado, Rowman & Littlefield, 2022.  She received her bachelor's, masters and doctoral degrees from Harvard University.